Paul C. Lee, M.D., has been promoted to Vice Chairman, Cardiothoracic Surgery and Chief, Thoracic Surgery Division at New York Hospital Queens by Samuel J. Lang, M.D., Chairman, Cardiothoracic Surgery.

Dr. Lee, who joined NYHQ in 2003 as an attending thoracic surgeon, is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons and a Fellow of the American College of Chest Physicians. He is an Associate Professor of Cardiothoracic Surgery at Weill Medical College of Cornell University, and an associate attending surgeon in the department of cardiothoracic surgery at NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital.

A graduate of Harvard College, Dr. Lee received his medical degree from Johns Hopkins University and finished his residency in general surgery at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center. He later completed fellowships in cardiothoracic surgery at NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital/Weill Cornell Medical Center and Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. During this time, he received additional training in minimally invasive thoracoscopic surgery at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center.

Dr. Lee has authored or co-authored more than fifty peer-reviewed journal articles as well as book chapters. He is currently an investigator or co-investigator in more than a dozen basic and clinical research trials, on subjects such as novel biological therapies for lung cancer. He has lectured both nationally and internationally. Since Dr. Lee joined NYHQ, he has built a first-rate thoracic surgery program, applying the latest minimally invasive techniques in the diagnosis and treatment of patients with thoracic malignancies. Dr. Lee places a special emphasis on a multidisciplinary approach to the care of cancer patients, working closely with physicians from primary care, pulmonary medicine, medical and radiation oncology.
