

Center for Prosthodontics and Implant Dentistry A Division of the Center for Dental and Oral Medicine

Program Facts for Physicians and Patients

New York Hospital Queens offers a specialty center for prosthodontics and implant dentistry in downtown Flushing that helps bring relief to Queens residents with complex dental problems, and offers a higher level of professional care at an affordable price.

Patients whose teeth or jaws are damaged due to trauma, illness or neglect need a specialized dentist who has the additional training to correct those problems. Examples of patients who can benefit from specialized dental care ranges from the infant born with a cleft lip and palate to those individuals who are missing teeth and require grafting and/or implants.

Frank Tuminelli, D.M.D., F.A.C.P., serves as program director, Prosthodontics Residency Program, a division of the Center for Dental and Oral Medicine at New York Hospital Queens. The faculty is comprised of specialists trained in restoring oral function, comfort and appearance. The team has the expertise to treat intricate restorations of the whole mouth, as well as, facial deformities. One of the unique aspects of New York Hospital Queens is that it offers the only center of this kind in Queens and Long Island.
